The Frames, Angel At My Table

There's an angel at my table And she broke her wings She's packed her things She said I'm the only one she'll turn to

But there's a devil on my shoulder And he's telling me she's so beautiful That I should go up there and hold up She's looking on

How can I stay here It wouldn't be what she wants And I'm trying to break it easy But she's pleading with me

Will you be my anchor When there is no-one around to hold me down Will you be my anchor I know you're not the answer

There's an angel at my table
And she's blessed the breeze
That blows in between her and everything
She's left in that (heaven)
And I wish she'd call
'Cause that devil's on my shoulder
And he's pulling me down
And I'm trying to keep a balance
But she's begging me

Will you be my anchor
When there is no-one around to hold me down
Will you be my anchor
I know you're not the answer

There's an angel at my table She said I'm the only one she'll turn to
