

The Mitch Hansen Band, A World Without You

Blood and glass were all i can see
I never should of brought you into my family
Felt the same first that he felt
But i'm a bit more kind
Leaving you was the only answer that i could find
Why did i go?
I still love you, you know?
I started dying when the future saw you fall
Imagine how it crashed me after i made that phone call
My instincts took control no thoughts of right or wrong
Believe me when i tell you that i thought that you were gone
I tried to think of how i'd start again
But a world without you is not worth living in
Been so long since i've known pain
I felted through your eyes that night
Among the trees and brace
Lying to you felt so strange
Of course i've always loved you and that will never change
Why did i go?
I still love you, you know?
I started dying when the future saw you fall
Imagine how it crashed me after i made that phone call
My instincts took control no thoughts of right or wrong
Believe me when i tell you that i thought that you were gone
I tried to think of how i'd start again
But a world without you is not worth living in
Why did i go?
I still love you, you know?
I started dying when the future saw you fall
Imagine how it crashed me after i made that phone call
My instincts took control no thoughts of right or wrong
Believe me when i tell you that i thought that you were gone
I tried to think of how i'd start again
I tried to think of how i'd start again
But a world without you is not worth living in