

The Ordinary Boys, Ballad of an Unrequited Self-

It's such a complicated situation, it always ends up in a fight, what I wouldn't give for some isolation but I catch my gaze across the bedroom, we only need some time alone, lost in a haze of self-indulgence it's an unrequited self-love affair and it's not fair, I need to be there for myself but I'm not there.
I am a danger to myself, let alone anyone else, I am a danger to myself, oh oh oh.
I've such a needless need for vindication, I have to show myself you see, if only for stealing all the credit
I like to tell myself I love you, even if from behind grinding teeth, sometimes I'm sure I half-believe it, it's an unrequited self-love affair and it's not fair I need to be there for myself but I'm not there
it's an unrequited self-love affair
