

The Tea Party, Coming Home

when frightened by change serenity clings to my sleep and wonders remain their world will inherit its meek and wicked's the taste
you feel when the mysteries arise i've fallen from grace
because of her treacherous eyes

you don't know
so alone
i'm coming home

and beauty's disdain attends to these virtuous lies she tries to restrain the ardent and amorous eyes
and wicked's the taste
you feel when mysteries arise
i've fallen from grace
because of her treacherous eyes

you don't know
so alone
I'm coming home