

Thousand Foot Krutch, The Last Song

You can throw away your expectations now
And all the things you wouldn't say out loud
There's nothing left to pick apart now
The cards are all down
And now you know the sound of my heart
When it hits the paper
There's no more mystery here

This is the last song

I remember when
We first became a band
We'd drive all night and talk about the world
I remember we used to now and then
Just sit and wonder where it all would go

This is the last song (the last song)
So everybody sing along
This the last song

This is the last song (the last song)
So everybody sing along
This the last song

You can throw away your expectations now
And all the things you wouldn't say out loud
The cards are all down
And now you know the sound of my heart
When it hits the paper
There's no more mystery here

This is the last song

I remember when we first became a band
We set up in the bedroom and practice all night long
I remember when we used to now and then keep the neighborhood up
From the sound of our guitars
I remember when we'd all hop in the van
Turn the radio on
We were off to see the world
Wake up at ten
To do it all again
Till the sun goes down
Cause this is all we know

This is the last song (the last song)
So everybody sing along
This the last song

This is the last song (the last song)
So everybody sing along
This the last song

I remember when
We first became a band
We'd drive all night and talk about the world
I remember we used to now and then
Just sit and wonder where it all would go

This is the last song (the last song)
So everybody sing along
This the last song

This is the last song (the last song)
So everybody sing along
This the last song
