Trans-Siberian Orchestra, For The Sake Of Our E

(NARRATION)

Ànd though his time was growing strained He could not walk away from this soul in pain For in the dark he had now seen The bleeding of this wound extreme So along the snow covered sidewalk The angel did carefully step Following the trail of blood drops Combined with tears that had never been wept And then he saw the businessman Who had been grumbling about this night And he wondered how that man had carried this wound So long throughout his life He watched the man walk past the church Where a song seemed to reach out for him But the man just walked right past it And would not let it in

(FOR THE SAKE OF OUR BROTHER) In a stable In a manger In the cold winter's air In the arms of his mother A child's lying there In a city In a village Though the years have gone by The child still remains With the dream still close by And each year on this night that child reawakens And each year on this night that hope rebegins That the dream he has offered might one day be taken For the sake of our brother For the child who's forgotten For the dream that is still lying there O' come all ye faithful Joyful and triumphant O' come ye, o' come ye To bethlehem Come and adore him Born the king of angels O' come let us adore him O' come let us adore him O' come let us adore him Christ the lord In a stable In a manger In the cold winter's air In the arms of his mother a child's lying there
