Trans-Siberian Orchestra, Who Is This Child

Who Is this child That I've never seen before Who Is this child That I've not seen till this day

Who dares to fall asleep Outside my door If we should wait awhile I'm sure she'll go away

To be involved with this Would surely not be wise For in the final word She means nothing to me

I learned the trick is That we just avoid her eyes And the question What she means to...

What is this life
There will be other lives
Soon to arrive
Surely some will survive
She is but one
And there are many more
Each the same as any other

Who is this child
What does she mean to me
I close my eyes
And still her face I see
She is but one
Her kind is everywhere
Can't you see there's no way I should care

I need a moment now I have to clear my mind Is there a limit, Lord Just to being kind

There is no way in life
That each child can be saved
Should I be looking with regret
At every grave

There are no guarantees In life she should be warned I'm not responsible for This child being born

I'm not responsible In any kind of way For every child that life can gather

What is this life There will be other lives Soon to arrive Surely some will survive

She is but one And there are many more Could this one life really matter Who is this child
What does she mean to me
I close my eyes
And still her face I see
She is but one
Her kind is everywhere
Can't you see there's no way I should care

Can you see it in the night Can you feel that it's out there It's the arcing of a life And it's hanging in the air

Though I try to close my eyes And pretend that I don't know In my heart I just can't let it go

There has to be another way for me A way that leads from this insanity A way that leads from my destruction as I say

Can you see it in the night Can you feel that it's out there It's the arcing of a life And it's hanging in the air

Though I try to close my eyes And pretend that I don't know In my heart I just can't let it go
