Unearth, Lie To Purify

consumed by self loving pain self loathing bliss it eats away burns you like a cancer the feeling's inside mask your size with your will now you fall from heart and soul break years of frustration all to plain to see ease into war invade with foul fingers lie to purify crushing what's not you they say some are born with a blackened heart fell to the curse of a bastard life cursed with a bastard life your lust to celebrate your name will cause your fall can't change years of frustration all have yearned to see the pedestal crumble ignored acts of agression falsify to slave avoiding all that's true you stand up then you fall heartless souless appetite you're crossing almost every line now it's time to wash away you lost your way you crossed the line you crossed every line