

Vanessa Carlton, Blue Pool

Man its so nice to see you again,
Near that grey blue pool in LA I close my book, move my bag, make some space Cause it's time to give that son a break.

Tell me now, how these two years have been What is living to honor the past?
I have been well, I say through a smile
These feelings, they come and go fast

Light your cigarette, I see the fame in your eyes Sing me that new song you sing
The time for you and I it was never quite right That matters. That means everything cause the Garden walls grow quick, and before know you're outside of it and the ivy is coming in Its so beautiful if you can find it

Time, she's always kept you on her good side some people they still fight their fate
I understood clear what you said with your eyes
We all speak in different ways

And the Garden walls grow quick, before know you're outside of it and the ivy's comin' in it's so beautiful if you can find it
