

Vanessa Williams, Snowflakes

I see all the snowflakes, falling down around me falling down, lovely and wide And all of these snowflakes, falling down around me seem so perfect, so right

Look at them tumbling down, each one is a flame all of them spinning me, daslinly the same See how they flow and bend swirling in neverending harmony

They glisten as they decent, sparkling like diamonds all the way To me it is crystal clear I'm not how they appear, shivering out here at my own

See how different I am, I'm not one of them I'm alone
