(One day, two days, three, four, five) A-that's how long that she's been gone And that's a long time Five days, five days Since you walked out the door Won't you please come home I couldn't stand five more Well the first day after she left me I laughed and told my friends That he'd be back before The sun is settin' low again Five days, five days Since you walked out the door Won't you please come home I couldn't stand five more Well, the second day after she left me I started to have my doubts I wondered if she was comin' back Really had checked out Five days, five days Since you walked out the door Won't you please come home I couldn't stand five more (One, two, three, four, five days more) Well, the third day after she left me I started to watch the door Before the day was over I began to walk the floor Five days, five days Since you walked out the door Won't you please come home I couldn't stand five more Well the fourth day after she left me I really began to sweat She should have been back days ago But she ain't got back yet Five days, five days Since you walked out the door Won't you please come home I couldn't stand five more (One, two, three, four, five days more)
