

War of Words, More Lies politicians on pedestals for heroism and grace (great) when only really found in the right time and the right place they just sit up in their office never really knowing fear as a thousand dead and dying will just further their career now it's just so easy, there's a dollar to be made all we need's a giant billboard erected out of someone's grave there's no profit margin in truth so we better sell our own lies travelling through time and space then beamed right back into your home they lie

on the news every station propaganda spreading from the television to the papers
with their stories they create- they're just painting the right picture for the right time and right place so now we can't believe in a single thing we read cause they're selling they're not telling and it's all based on their greed and this shit only seeps into every mind you see every boring life that can't escape t.v. reality did you really find it coincidence when hollywood shits out more than a dozen flicks to glorify americans at war military takes the cue with more ads running day and night do you really believe dying a hero is more glorious than living? but if you'd rather die- if you think it's my supply than swallow all your medicine and never question why just pray to your remote, and sign away your life, and take your bet on who's the threat your wager's lost cause it's a lie switch on the camera does it matter who dies? there's always profit in pain there's always profit in lies
