

West Indian Girl, Back To You

As he rose up to meet the challenge
Words he might have said
An arrow shot through his heart and
Stopped him in his tracks

I'm running, running, running back to you

He lied awake counting minutes
He imagined he was under water
Where she's swimming out beneath the surface
Together between the currents

I'm running, running, running back to you

People believe
I still remember
People lose
And still regret
People become
I shouldn't have told her
People dream
To forget

He reached out with a whisper
Hoping she might hear
In his mind, she is dancing
I want you

I'm running, running, running back to you