

Wide Mouth Mason, My New Self

I came home late one night and I didn't see the car
I went inside and looked around and all I saw
The note she left was to the point it's you she wants
And her that you want too

I can't forgive you just so you know
I can't forgive you just so you know
I can't forgive you maybe my old self would
My new self won't

And since the incident I haven't been the same
I went inside and looked around and played the game
I tried to hold you up but crashing down you came
Now what'd you come to do

Or I'll just read it from the lines across your face
Or from the way your hands are all over the place
I'll take a picture of you with me just in case
I can't remember you

I can't forgive you just so you know
I can't forgive you just so you know
I can't forgive you maybe my old self would
My new self won't

I can't forgive you just so you know
I can't forgive you just so you know
I can't forgive you maybe my old self would
My new self won't

Open up the door and let me in
Oh things are not the way they should have been

I see a car out on the distance
And my hands are going numb
I see a car out on the distance
It's the reason that I've come

I can't forgive you just so you know
I can't forgive you just so you know
I can't forgive you maybe my old self would
My new self won't

My old self would, my new self won't
My old self would, my new self won't
My old self would, my new self won't
My old self would, my new self won't
