

Windsor Drive, Monotone Epilogue Of Brilliance

I love how your intriguing eyes.
Lead me gamefaced into empty rooms..
I watch your sapphire lies.
Unfold as your lustful ways start to consume.
You say silence is golden.
In a dancing masquerade of sheets.
I know that you're hoping.
That I strip you from your head down to your feet.

You stare at me with your fashion.
And approach me so cinematically.
Come closer just to kiss.
Me so hard with your poisonous lips.
A lover with compassion.
So deep that she dies to bury me.
Like Romeo and Juliet.
Cant breathe without you hear with me.

Your spontaneous outburst of chaos.
Has created the love that has made us..
We're so beautiful when we are kissing.
Its so sad not knowing what we were missing.

Weeping under the moonlit sky.
You're finally able to cry.
Thanking this knife for a bitter end.
That you know nothing else could mend.
We were so beautiful when we were alive