Yaz, Tuesday

Woman of thirty seeing the sun Packed up her suitcase started to run Looking for someone looking for none Pack up and drive away

It was her birthday morning Realisation gradually dawning A man in a grey suit whispered 'I'm calling' Pack up and drive away

Woman of thirty, husband and kids Chained like a dog she had to rid No point in coping off came the lid Pack up and drive away

Three thousand miles of honesty dreaming Perfect imagery is a gleaming No more shattered clouds were deeming Pack up and drive away

In her heart it wasn't easy
Mumbled words and feeling dizzy
Reasons fight against excuses
Mothers have their ways and uses
Driving slower she was losing
Dream was stirring only dozing
Eyelids awaken to the daytime
Just an illusion broken sunshine
Woman of thirty there's no choice
I can't help your helpless voice
