

Your Shapeless Beauty, Deities In The Dew

Deities In The Dew

(music: Canavaggia, lyrics: Blachier) the twilight as a veil covers yours will in the shadows of the night the dreams I sow become my pride the stary vault beholds my reign and light my throne I awake so close to death that my life holds to a breath while morpheus opens his arms I exhumate all my desires for I dig graves with all yours fears symbols and signs that bleed you dry flying far from mortal life forgetting your tranquillity

I will stand for sovereignty a new god, this is what I will be

I rule the land of earthly things that rise their hands for they acclaim the new era, my kingdom of pain blind fools they are, but sinner I am in my heaven I reach the shores of confusion through endless wisdom and I wonder through the eyes of a sad ghost the world appears so cold to have a revenge on the past made of me a sinfull beast the sweet caresses I used to feel carve now and forever my name on the stone an epitaph unread by all, anger blinds my hollow eyes mine she is with the stars higher than god I will be I'll crush his last infamy

in the haze of dawn lies my deception
