

Zed Yago, Achilles Heel

When you were young some years ago your old man told you don't you set yourself on fire, listen the point of all is what you do not what you are talking about no matter what you've been going through.
Don't give a damn, all those bridges you've crossed still trying to catch the rainbow.
You'll spread your wings to rise up high, only need the wind to blow and after all you will know where to go.

Fight, you got to be a fighter, don't show your Achilles heel life will turn out lighter, six feet water under your keel.
