3 Inches Of Blood, The Phantom Of The Crimson

out of the fog comes a huddled shape cloaked head to toe in crimson flowing robes it hunts, kills, eats unseen in sickening mists of night, some evils lurking in the gloom voracious hunting appetite and piercing demon eyes a mandrake sets upon its prey, slashing mangled claws soulstealer strangling terror, in crimson cloak it kills mortals who cross the path the phantom hunts and kills with a swift ferocity the demons carcass strikes death is his way, dare not to cross his path in fright captured by its frozen stare, your body drained of essence predator of the pure in heart, sending all their soulds to hell there is no escape from here, phantom horror attack he must feed on innocent human flesh to hold the madness at bay that torments his eternal march death is his way, dare not cross his path the phantom of the crimson cloak stalks the dark and silent night an ancient corpse hes trod this worn path many forlorn years aeons yet to come death is his way, dare not cross his path the phantom of the crimson stalks the dark and silent night