

311, Still Dreaming

i'll not renounce my views do what others do i'd rather drink the hemlock than be like you, to my soul untrue
it never gets easier so quit tryin pleasing her everything is a choice so let me hear your voice

born in october night feeling was out a sight skin i'm in now and then moves like a meteorite

noise in our culture is built in our nature another era will decode as we head toward rapture suppose we're all gifted suppose that the mist is a metaphor for change suppose the veil will be lifted sacrament that i hold close and i feel noble solar marigolds light the souls return from that other world sometimes when i'm awake

i can't tell if i'm still dreaming there's so much here at stake when every moment is just fleeting
sometimes when i'm awake
i can't tell if i'm still dreaming

it never gets easier so quit tryin pleasing her
everything is a choice so let me
hear your voice

rip up the evening post kill parasitic hosts we can shoulder all the karma that came with los alamos return the sky bottle blue return that forgotten hue a looking glass world seeing into and through you soul and body are my twins that latter will give in when the former views the ocean as not too cold to get in to alien life forms these waters are real warm but beware we can change the weather create a snowstorm

sometimes when i'm awake
i can't tell if i'm still dreaming
there's so much here at stake
when every moment is just fleeting
sometimes when i'm awake
i can't tell if i'm still dreaming

no i'll not renounce my views do what others do
i'd rather drink the hemlock than be like you,
to my soul untrue
it never gets easier so quit tryin pleasing her
everything is a choice so let me
hear your voice