

A Burning Water, Turquoise Tears

Left over kindergarten scribble stained upon my mind my window sill sits wet with rain from simple sighs like waving time I've helped you here to sign your crimes their words within this crippled line I can't remain here today these eyes of yours are traveling you hand these stones a life away you speak my heart in silhouette here i trace alone blinded by your thoughts your whispering
I can't remain here today
these eyes of yours are traveling
you hand these stones a life away you speak
my heart in silhouette
and spiteful words are all I know and as the tears flow dry like the time that's passed me by I wish for you to feel my pain and as the imprints of your kiss still live with me I dream of you yes i dream of you and as I hold my breath and wish for you to see me here and as I wait wait for you to bury me beneath this floor and as I sit a ghost among the life I die...