

A Day To Remember, Welcome To My Family

We're finally alone at last
Oh, how I've waited for this day to come
There's just something about you that rubs me wrong
(You're not worth my attention)
I built this with my own two hands
And you can spare me the time
Stop using me as your next misconception
I don't believe that everything
You've known about me is gone forever
And I won't forget the days that we spent forever
It haunts me
I don't believe that everything
You've known about me is gone forever
And I won't forget the days that we spent forever
It haunts me
It won't be long before you meet your end
You're nothing more than a passing frame
So keep those cameras rolling
You think I wouldn't remember
You thought that I would lose faith in myself
You can spare me the lies, you don't believe in me
You're life's a contradiction
I don't believe that everything
You've known about me is gone forever
And I won't forget the days that we spent forever
It haunts me
I don't believe that everything
You've known about me is gone forever
And I won't forget the days that we spent forever
It haunts me
We set the fire around your lies
This is the man of the hour
(So move us aside)
You see your future
And they bury you alive
Move
I don't believe that everything
You've known about me is gone forever
And I won't forget the days that we spent forever
It haunts me
I don't believe that everything
You've known about me is gone forever
And I won't forget the days that we spent forever
It haunts me