A Day To Remember, Welcome To My Family

We're finally alone at last

Oh, how I've waited for this day to come

There's just something about you that rubs me wrong

(You're not worth my attention)
I built this with my own two hands

And you can spare me the time

Stop using me as your next misconception

I don't believe that everything

You've known about me is gone forever

And I won't forget the days that we spent forever

It haunts me

I don't believe that everything

You've known about me is gone forever

And I won't forget the days that we spent forever

It haunts me

It won't be long before you meet your end

You're nothing more than a passing frame

So keep those cameras rolling

You think I wouldn't remember

You thought that I would lose faith in myself

You can spare me the lies, you don't believe in me

You're life's a contradiction

I don't believe that everything

You've known about me is gone forever

And I won't forget the days that we spent forever

It haunts me

I don't believe that everything

You've known about me is gone forever

And I won't forget the days that we spent forever

It haunts me

We set the fire around your lies

This is the man of the hour

(So move us aside)

You see your future

And they bury you alive

Move

I don't believe that everything

You've known about me is gone forever

And I won't forget the days that we spent forever

It haunts me

I don't believe that everything

You've known about me is gone forever

And I won't forget the days that we spent forever

It haunts me