

A Fine Frenzy, Last Of Days

some things causing feet to fly, rising like a dark knight in silence
traffics slow with broken boats heading for the sky and I'm an island

I watched you disappear into the clouds swept away into another town the world carries on without you but nothing remains the same I'll be lost without you

until the last of days

the sun is in the east, rising for the beasts and the beauties
if only I could tear it down, plant it in the ground to warm your face

I built myself a castle on the beach watching as it slid into the sea

through wars and harvest moons I will wait for you.
