

A Girl Called Eddy, Girls Can Really Tear You Up

There's a girl whose stuck inside a picture frame
She's seen your face, her mother's mentioned once your name
She sits and dreams, her fifteen year old dreams of what to do
She's heard you sing and that your eyes are very, very, very blue
Why do you run? Why do you hide?
From all you are, you're just a man
She could tear you up inside
Tear you up inside
She could tear you up inside
Tear you up inside
She has a home outside this little picture frame
You're not in it and she wants someone to blame
Do you remember what it's like to be that young
All the pages that are blank and all the songs yet to be sung
Why do you run? Why do you hide?
From all she is, she's just a girl
Girls can tear you up inside
Tear you up inside
They can tear you up inside
Tear you up inside
If there are words, you want to say
She's waitin' for that rainy, that rainy day
Why do you run? Why do you hide?
From all she is, she's just a girl
You're just a boy
Tomorrow's gonna comes anyway
And you can see it in the inside
They can tear you up inside
Tear you up inside
They can tear you up inside
Tear you up inside
They can tear you up inside
Tear you up inside