A Guy Called Gerald, Humanity

These days I find I'm wasting my time On all the little things that shouldn't concern me Weighing my heart with such confused emotion Letting anxiousness in where peace should prevail It's just my humanity Getting the better of me It's just my humanity Getting the better, getting the better of me I've been working on it, just trying and working on it Knowing the soul to be lighter if I could just shed this weight Or just carry this weight without objection So weight become lightness, so light becomes weightless Oh it's just my humanity Getting the better of me It's just my humanity Getting the better, getting the better of me

I'm lifting the lid off eventually
Holding my head up and clarity
Where once there was proud
I know this place and smile inside
Oh it's just my humanity
Getting the better of me
It's just my humanity
Getting the better, getting the better of me
Yeah it's just my humanity
Getting the better, getting the better of me
Getting the better, getting the better, getting the better of me
It's just my humanity
Getting the better, getting the better of me
