

Abigail Williams, The World Beyond

Dwells no man into this infinity for as the last glow of the sun sets i feel an affinity towards the unity between mankind and his divinity

And they shall live out there lives like an atom in infinity void of their true destiny

Though all of this holds a globe of significance to the coarse corruption the two thousand years of false assumption

So i gaze to the stars and seek the strange wisdom of the worlds beyond empowered by the pulse of the cosmos to leave this world behind there is an exit

I see nothing as the last glow of the sun sets I walk this earth like sand in the wind, drifting on and on into the years

And they have lived out there lives like atoms in infinity driven to madness the moon speaks to no one spheres of darkness perpetual through the aeons and beyond in the moonlight upon the shoulders they ask us a question one thousand words

read the writing on the walls
