

Acid Death, Realising

Let me relate you to something
Maybe a piece of myself
I'm so lonely- I don't know why
I don't know why I feel so much aversion for those I look alike
(Feel so much aversion for those I look alike)

How foolish a man can be Closing my eyes I recollect remembering those Glory Days
Looking for something different, intact, extravagant
Leading me to entireness

It's so difficult to overtake the time lying on to your dreams
But more difficult is to find one to trust in good and bad times

I made the final mistake
To believe everything around me as true
Betraying my secrets to the Wrong
I got to be their slave

Like a fading flower I feel to myself to be as pure as them
My only acquisition along with the black thoughts
Was my own flesh

Isolation-the only way to escape
Betraying dreams and myself
And now, living lonely in this town
I try to live again screaming silently for my lost dreams
