

Aimee Mann, Say Anything

You see me as a judge though I deny it and hold me like a grudge then justify it But when you make such claims in searching for something that explains please take a good look at our remains

'Cause if you were everything you say things would be different today and maybe there's room for compromise but signs that I get say otherwise say anything, 'cause I've heard everything

As hopeless as it seems I wouldn't worry You'll get your chance to tell your side of the story And, raising your right hand, whatever defenses you had planned, remember that when you take the stand -

If you were everything you say
and though I'd be happy to believe I'd have to be much more naive -
say anything, 'cause I've heard everything now I've heard everything

So why do I refuse the truth, when I clearly cannot use the comfort of one more lame excuse

things would be different today and if you were everything you swear we wouldn't be beyond repair
If you were everything you say
and if there has got to be an if - get it over with
say anything, 'cause I've heard everything
