Air, Somewhere Between Waking And Sleeping

Without blindness, there is no sight You'd see further if you'd only close your eyes In unconsciousness I can find peace Inside prison walls I can find release There is a place that I have seen

Somewhere between waking and sleeping Down at the water's edge Somebody waits for me Is it too late for me It's never too late, he says

[Left Channel] Without blindness, there is no sight You'd see further if you'd close your eyes Unblock the failure

[Right Channel] Without blindness, there is failure People gather by the river They were talking

There is a place that I have seen Somewhere between waking and sleeping Leaning over the side Trailing my fingertips Feeling the water slip Into the quiet night

Viewed from the wrong end of a telescope I see myself, so far below Still and silent, rest in peace The thread unravels Merciful release

There is a place that I have seen Somewhere between waking and sleeping Now I can almost see Figures upon the shore He's gathering in the oars Where are you taking me
