

Alan Parsons, Siren Song

Days go by adrift upon a rolling sky
No miracles escape my eyes but still I hope
Time, regret, is this as good as life can get
It's only when the spirit sets me free I cope

If I seek in every corner, if I search in every doorway
When the water turns to wine will I believe?
If I navigate the river would you take me to your island
Sing the siren song so I could never leave

Long and wide eternity from side to side
Lead me through the rapids, guide me to the shore
There's a place that's far beyond this time and space
When each of us comes face to face with something more

If I open up the channel will you send me information
If you tune me to your station I'll receive
If I navigate the river would you take me to your island
Sing the siren song so I could never leave

Plans can fail, but only fail to understand
The pyramid will turn to sand and I'll be here
I will be here
