

Albert Hammond, Your World And My World

"It isn't easy to say goodbye
I try to understand the reason why My body is shaking My heart is aching within me

From my window I watch you go He's waiting for you in the street below
His arms wide open while mine are cold and so empty

'Cause your world and my world they're drifted apart
in yours the sun is shining
in mine it's raining
knocking on the lonely one

And your life and my life they've gone separated ways in yours a new tomorrow
in mine the sorrow

Through the teardrops that cloud my eyes I see the image of the love gone by a silhouette that I won't forget for a long time
The days are longer now that you're gone Without your loving arms to keep me whole My future lies on a cloudy skies with no sunshine

'Cause your world and my world they're drifted apart

And your life and my life they've gone separated ways
knocking on the lonely one"
