

Alexis Strum, The Long Way Home

Wait

There's something I gotta say to you

Something I've always wanted to

Always on my mind

Please, don't put it all on me

It was never meant to be

I gave in too easily

And I'm scared, and I'm tired

I don't wanna fight

I can't change the world

I haven't got the nerve

And I'm wrong and I'm right

But it's set in stone

Did you ever love somebody so,

You turn around and let them go?

I'll take the long way home

I'll take the long way home

Hide, hide away your grace

It's too good to waste

On a fool like me

Run, run that river dry

Tears that I don't cry

Memories won't fade and die

And I'm scared, and I'm tired

I don't wanna fight

I can't change the world

I haven't got the nerve

And I'm wrong and I'm right

But it's set in stone

Did you ever love somebody so,

You turn around and let them go?

I'll take the long way home

I'll take the long way home

Did you ever have to tear yourself

Did you ever have to tear yourself

Did you ever have to tear yourself away?

Did you ever have to bear yourself

With no way to prepare yourself

Did you ever have to tear yourself away?
