&lt;lyrics&gt;

So, I will stare into your eyes
If love lies dormant in them
Without covering them, catching up

Turns into an endless gentle crime

Even a lot of transient dreams
Crossed over to me
In the end, will I wake up
After you?

Why do people want us to be charmed?
Without us being able to touch
Although even the moon of the reachless night
Passed alone

Scattering the poison of moth scales
The butterfly who can't stop dancing
Throws its body into the Milky Way
If it doesn't even want
To be born again

Now, I will stare into your eyes
If there is a lot of hatred in them
Bundling your eyes up in light
Will you kill me by burning me to death?

What can stop me from searching
So quickly is love
As I seriously
Still have it

Why do people want to meet
And pick out their fates?
Like the shivering pale wings
Are softly given to me

In order for me to face my journey
I must live just to die
Just like I don't notice the pain
If when you smile lasts forever
I will remember

Why do people want us to get along?
It's so hard for us to connect our hands
Since the truth is so weak
Should I just search for happiness?

In the full bloom of the flowers
The lost and wandering butterfly
Embraces the wind of thin ink
Turning into flower petals
And covered to the ground

Why do people want to meet
And pick out their fates?
Like the shivering pale wings
Are crushed with my own hands

If I want to face my journey
I have to live just to die
For us to live where we do now
I will just wish
For one of us to die
