should it still be darkness
when i open my eyelids
then i shall remain in the depths of a dream

on the white drop curtains that cover me your gentle gaze
paints a vivid picture

please look
at this nameless soul
that was born
all alone in the world

when someone
softly touches me
only the strength to believe that those fingers are yours is my reality

grass sprouts in the battle grounds where there was no colour of the blood that once spilled

would even the grief that flows in this heart that is colder than the wasteland someday melt?

please come and see
this trembling soul
that is still all alone in the world and growing faint

calls out to me
only the power to keep thinking that that voice is yours fills my life

please search
for the soul that remembered to have forever lived

holds me
only the fate to believe that those arms are yours and wait is my every light
