Putting the perfume, they simply have to appear
Sleeping and awaking, those mischievous girls
Of rose colors.
Are you free tonight?

You were loved in that everyday life,
Softly returns a keen fragrance
Of stabbed heart.

When the curtain unfolds,
Even stars cry their serenades.

I am the Diva, singing at heart,
Tonight's Prima, at this stage of love.
I am the Diva, whose voice withers,
Alone, am singing.

Beautiful dawn descends,
The letter you write with the ocean ink
Of the color of darkness remains in the window.
I love you, my dear.

Holding you closely,
That sweetly sad dream in jade green that you saw
Forever vanishes.

Tearing it, I write
The sonet which would silence even the moon.

I am the Poet, I think I'm in love,
Prima of fate, giving myself to you.
I am the Poet, praying with my pen,
Alone, with my poetry.

I am the Diva, inside your heart,
Prima of sorrows, wanting to fall.
I am the Diva, wanting to slip my shoes off,
Alone, am dancing.
