

Alison Krauss & Union Station, Winter Of A Broken Heart

Alison Krauss & Union Station

Miscellaneous

Winter Of A Broken Heart

Oh it seems the sun will never shine

The skies are so gray and the heart you left broken is lonely

The winter wind blows through the trees and with the song I sing

I long for the days you loved me only

Sorrow lingers, shadows only fill the empty room

Nights of lonely cries unheard

In the winter of a broken heart

Oh the nights will never be the same as when the love was new

Young hearts so tender in their yearning

But seasons, change and lovers too

And winter's twice as cold

But the fire in one heart is always burning

Sorrow lingers, shadows only fill the empty room

Nights of lonely cries unheard

In the winter of a broken heart

Though a million hours pass the time and lonely is the pain

And what was love is just a spell that's broken

So blow the wind and freeze the rain and try like lover's do

Seems our hearts have never really spoken

Sorrow lingers, shadows only fill the empty room

Nights of lonely cries unheard

In the winter of a broken heart