

All Together Separate, Something Electric

Millions wander around this place
Bewildered wonder on their face
Something electric
Jagged rocks that reach and pry
Water falls through shattered sky
Something electric
Silent impact
As the fountain meets its fate
Something electric
Be still, don't try to explain, keep listening
Oh, just know that God made you
Something electric
Rising in the east
The horizon is alive
Something electric
Crimson splashes
Chips the break of day
There's something electric
Could it be the colors?
Could it be the way the sun chases the night away?
I don't know but there's something electric
Be still, don't try to explain, keep listening
Oh, just know that God made you
Something electric
Light decides to rest while evening takes center stage
Shadows grow making crosses seem more like skyscrapers
The dust innocently passes while His mother pauses to weep
She sees Him hanging there between two worlds like some Link between severed loves or some ornament of divine madness
But in His last breath in His last thought
He knew that you were something electric
Be still, don't try to explain, keep listening
Oh, just know that God made you
Something electric
Be still, don't try to explain, keep listening
Oh, just know that God made you
Something electric
Be still, don't try to explain, keep listening
Oh, just know that God made you
Something electric
Be still, don't try to explain, keep listening