

Amaran, Without Stains

Somehow in it for the chase so I run away I run like hell, don't think for a second that I wasn't prepared Strange you never did do ask why I always wore my winter coat For times like these when I'm forced out running in the snow

All I asked for was the naked truth Was too much for you to handle Was too much for me to ask Every time that you fake a smile
Play the martyr in the play Of the story about you and I

Some days everything is red like roses without thorns Loves me loves me not, soft petals slowly hit the floor
Are we supposed to spit it out until there's nothing left to break It's over now this is the end and you better understand

Are we supposed to spit it out?

Send a message that is loud and clear A message that's so simple That even you can hear
They say it took you two whole days
To find happiness again on the lips of another man
