Andrew Lloyd Webber, The Point Of No Return

A man of intrigue He lives for the thrill Always has places to go And people to kill

Danger is the game he plays And he holds every card 'Cause if you wanna win You gotta the point of no return

A man of the world So suave and discreet He trips over the women Piled up at his feet

But evil's lurking So he's always on his guard Cause if your gonna spy You better the point of no return

He's always there When the chips are beginning to fall He wouldn't care if they kicked him and grabbed him And shot him and stabbed him And nailed both his ears to the wall

Facing death everyday Is a tough job for any man But his hours are flexible And he's got a great dental plan

By the way if you walked in late Allow me to reiterate The name of this movie is the point of no return

They call it the point of no return You're watching the point of no return It's the theme from the point of no return