

Andru Donalds, Waiting For The Hurricane

I see I read our lives in the news
It said our inner fate is whether we win or lose
Can't you see there's always a way to never waste time
Inner faith and dreams release the tension

Unchain your mind
Unchain your mind

The day can never happen waiting for the hurricane
If we look to far ahead today is gone
You will always miss the moment waiting for the hurricane
Cause the fear of future hides the sun

If you can't seem to find new oceans and a little bit more
Slowly we will fall if we lose sight of the shore
In the race to be the better or best
Don't miss it, the joy of being, or you will never rest

So unchain your mind
Unchain your mind