

Angelo Kelly, You Have A Place

conspiracy, a big mystery, we disagree, but tell me who doesn't.
the same blood, the same life, it's not enough, enough to prevent, us from going on lashing out on each other, instead of keep in touch, we just don't even bother, I'll try to not forget you're still my older brother, but it's all gone wrong.
you will always have a place in our world
you will always have a place in our world
your list , is too long, 'cause life is different, it doesn't work like that.
if you can't have it, then no one can, it's a bad habit, oh how about working. did you really think it would all stay the same, now you're always looking for someone to blame.
but father ain't here and he ain't gonna judge who's right now.
you will always have a place in our world
you will always have a place in our world