Anna Ternheim, One To Blame

Voices hard and hollow Colder than I ever was before I'm leaving you pieces Of love to come for more

You always find me miles from where I said you must let go Or nothing sounds convincing To the one you can't say no

Who could possibly save Save us from madness Love is the common name Again, we depend On the one to blame

It's bittersweet to swallow Kindness as a consequence of guilt So gather up the pieces of your last and dying will And prepare yourself to live with whatever follows pain

Who could possibly save Save us from madness Love is the common name Again, we depend On the to blame