

Aphrodite's Child, It's Five O'Clock

It's five o'clock
and I walk through the empty streets
thoughts fill my head but then still
No one speaks to me
My mind takes me back to the years that have passed me by

[interlude]

It is so hard te believe that it's me
that I see
in the window pane
It it so hard to believe that all this the way
that it has to be It's five o'clock
and I walk through the empty streets
The night is my friend
And in him
I find sympathy
thus so
And so I go back to the years that have past me by

[interlude]

It is so hard to believe that it's me
that I see
in the window pane
It it so hard to believe
that all this the way
that it has to be

It's five o'clock
and I walk through the empty streets
The night is my friend
And in him I find sympathy
He gives me day
gives me hope
and a little dream too