Arsis, Lust Before The Maggots Conquest

You whose amber eyes are the curse of all loneliness Who greets life with a kiss of indifference You whose vanity must guide the garden path and surely surpass your suffocating pride Consummate in selfish ways have I lost my will? Lost sense of self, it is done, I know I must be... Falling forever when bonds start to sever I know I'll hope and pray... The promise of never was my oath forever I know I hope and pray you've had your fill of lust before the maggots conquest Your mark about my neck A keepsake of your vanity and when swollen fears are forever mine This is true I know I must be... Forever touched by the fire Was it your innocence that kept me at bay? Time was not mine, I was forever The wolf at the door shrouded with greed
