

AspidistrA, Brooding over Us

Have not seen you far too long
Wish you'd come when the lights are out
It would be sort of like sun shining bright at midnight

I can't hide the sense of loss
Kissing and hugging the memories
Which have your shape, your smile and different shades of hope

Heard different stories that hurt
Don't believe a single one
Waiting for your candid tale to recount what is done

I'm just guilty of brooding over us
Instead of letting go of all the bitterness
Instead of ending up stronger than before
I'm just restlessly brooding over us

You've updated your account
Uploaded smiling photos
In the captions, I hope to discern signs of certain loss

I know with time it all shall pass
I'll stop brooding over us
And search for sunshine during the day not at night.

And yet, I'm guilty of brooding over us
Instead of letting go of all the bitterness
Instead of ending up stronger than before
I know it'll pass, I'll stop brooding over us

I should have known better
One door shuts another door opens
And it kills the sense of failure at lost plans and dreams

Won't feel remorse anymore
If I forget your face one day
One day, I'll move on and find that confidence

And yet, I'm just guilty of brooding over us
Instead of letting go of all the bitterness
Instead of ending up stronger than before
I know it'll pass, I'll stop brooding over us