

Athelete, It's Not Your Fault

It's not your fault
You didn't see it coming
90 miles an hour, gone so fast
And now you're left with nothing at all
It's not your fault
I've given every part of you
That they could spare
Mixed between the petrol
And the wildlife and it's cold
Are those still your eyes?
Now that you've gone to some place else
I can't save you
'Cause the brightest lights are closing in on us
Are those still your eyes
Now that you've gone to some place else
I can't save you
So I'm giving every part of you away
It's not your fault
The dance you made up
To your bedroom every night
Leaves us chasing memories
And trying to understand, we can't wait
Are those still your eyes?
Now that you've gone to some place else
I can't save you
'Cause the brightest lights are closing in on us

Are those still your eyes?
Now that you've gone to some place else
I can't save you
So I'm giving every part of you away
Oh my God
What the hell just happened here?
Oh my God
What the hell just happened?
Oh my God
(Are those still your eyes?)
What the hell just happened here?
(Now that you've gone to some place else)
Oh my God
(I can't save you)
(Cause the brightest lights are closing in on us)
What the hell just happened?
Oh my God
(Those still your eyes?)
What the hell just happened here?
(Now that you've gone to some place else)
Oh my God
(I can't save you)
(So I'm giving every part of you away)
What the hell just happened?
