

Australian Crawl, Can I Be Sure

Too many people need a pseudonym
Cut their hair and pout like anything So worried that the real them might get in And paranoid about their skin
They usually have good fashion sense
So aware that red and green offends
Most have a popstar for a friend Or live of what their parents send

Can I be sure when I don't know who I am talking to anymore

They so adamant in their belief sincere dedicated and cheap Maintain they've never needed to enfeoff or justify to their relief But then it barely lasts an episode from verse to verse without a pallnode into the next issue of mode spectacled and pidgeon toed

With well established social prejudice become second rate rock journalists never satisfy the need to outwit and influence the modernist
Too many people need a pseudonym
cut their hair and pout like anything so afraid the real them might get in concern and always rivalling
