

Automatic Loveletter, The Answer

From ocean to sky, summer and fall
I have been there through it all
From laughing and crying to pain that comes easy
From shades of gray meaning that turn out so sweetly
I wonder when I wonder what I'll find

I look up to the sun, it only hurts my eyes
Maybe it's the answer I've been wanting in disguise
The more you aren't with me, the more that I'm alone
I don't need the answer, I already know

Subtle and grays, desperate for change
My hand moves away, you melt dry ice for days
Something's not right with these smiles and tantrums
Hit the ground running, it's all over and been done

I look up to the sun, it only hurts my eyes
Maybe it's the answer I've been wanting in disguise
The more you aren't with me, the more that I'm alone
I don't need the answer, I already know

What happens next?
We stop and go, the promise is already run cold
So now you know, so now you know

I look up to the sun, it only hurts my eyes
Maybe it's the answer I've been wanting in disguise
The more you aren't with me, the more that I'm alone
I don't need the answer, the answer

I look up to the sun, it only hurts my eyes
Maybe it's the answer I've been wanting in disguise
The more you aren't with me, the more that I'm alone
I don't need the answer, I already know
