

Automatic Loveletter, The Day That Saved Us

Walking down the street that we grew up in
But today it's not the same
It's like a different town, a different place, a different name
I kick my heels against the curb
Throw a stone to where you lived
Hoping I'll see you again
Hope is low, will you show?

And I remember that day that saved us
How you kissed me on the salt that filled my eyes
We remember our California
The night we slept along the shore and watched a wave

Lying on the sand the waves are talking and the humming of the trains
But it's a different sound, a different cloud, a different rain
My blood flows faster with every thought with everything that happened here
And it takes the pain away
Hope is low, will you show again?

And I remember that day that saved us
How you kissed me on the salt that filled my eyes
We remember our California
The night we slept along the shore and watched a wave

I remember the day that saved us
The way you kissed me and the salt that filled my eyes

And I remember that day that saved us
How you kissed me on the salt that filled my eyes
We remember our California
The night we slept along the shore and watched a wave

I still remember this
Do you remember me?
